Dear Hiring Manager:

I have seen your post for junior developer. I believe that this job would be an ideal fit with my skills and interests, as well allow myself to grow and learn new skills.

I'm a 22 year old undergraduate student in my final year studying for my bachelor's degree in computer science. Going through school I have worked with several programming paradigms ranging from object oriented to functional, worked in a group environment to create my own android app, and created several web-based apps. From this I have learned that teamwork, organizational and time management skills are essential in creating a productive and efficient workplace and this results in a better product. My greatest strength is my ability to want to keep learning and improve. I think this would help me in this job as I will be able to adapt quickly and learn how to complete my task effectively and efficiently. I have a variety of technical skills such as a variety of programming languages, database systems, multiple software tools, and the Linux operating system. These skills were gained primarily through school assignments and activities. For a detailed overview of my interpersonal and technical skills I recommend that you check out my online web portfolio that outline several school assignments where these skills were used.

I have enclosed my resume along with this letter. I hope it can further explain my skills and previous experience. I am looking forward to meeting you for the interview. You can contact me at (613)-406-9723 and through email at pravdeep375@gmail.com. Thank you for time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Pravdeep Deol
